JAN COOK MACK PAINTINGS

- Jan Cook Mack established herself as a fine artist in New York City before moving to Eastern Washington state in 1986. Mack's paintings arise out of an emotional response to the natural world. Mack's move from Vermont to Washington expanded her pastoral views to include explosive wild-scape vistas.
- "Painting on site allows the energy of the place to fully enter the artwork and give a voice to invisible forces" she says. I seek high elevation painting sites to depict a bird's eye view of the dynamic geology spread below."
- Her studies in Taiwan of Chinese handscroll painting have influenced her panoramic vision of the West.

Then because I was living in orchards, I started to paint fruit when it was ripe on the trees. Apples, cherries, apricots, peaches, grapes... And then orchards in bloom.
